In professional wrestling a DDT is any move in which the wrestler has the opponent in a front facelock/inverted headlock, and falls down or backwards to drive the opponent's head into the mat. The classic DDT is performed by putting the opponent in a front facelock and falling backwards so that the opponent is forced to dive forward onto his or her head.

Variations Argentine neckbreaker. The attacking wrestler first places their opponent face-up across their shoulders, as in an Argentine backbreaker rack, and hooks the opponent's head with one hand and their leg with the other. From here, the attacking wrestler throws the legs of the opponent out backwards and drops down to the mat while holding onto the opponent's head, dragging the opponent ...

Hi – thanks for posting this article, it just answered a ton of my questions about reverse chronology. I have an idea about writing from the middle of my story, working backwards with one character arc and forwards (standard chronology) with a second character arc. (yes, both characters meet at the end.)
